New York, 7 May, 1866.

My Dear Garrison,

On this evening of the day preceding that so long observed at the anniversary of the American A.S. Society, I am irresistably reminded of you; for at this time, in former years, I used to meet you at the railway station and welcome you to New York. As the Freedmen's and Union Commission (unfortunately, as I think) is to hold no anniversary this week, I presume you will not be here; and so I sit down to write you a brief letter, for the sake of telling you once more how ~~desirous~~^{desirous} I am that you may find it practicable to come to the Yearly Meeting at Longwood. I know, of course, that you will be glad to come if you can; but I have feared, and still fear, that you may be hindered by your unfortunate lameness, or by some pressing duty to be done at home.

Still, I cherish fondly the hope that you will come, in company with our dearly beloved Thompson. Our friends generally are anxious to have your presence and aid, and I have assured them that I will present the case as strongly as I know how to do. They will most cheerfully pay all the expenses of the journey.

I shall write to Mr. Thompson to-night, and I hope that nothing will occur to prevent his attendance.
If you and he come together, the understanding is that you are to be entertained by our beloved friends, Chandler & Harriet Dashiell, whose house is the pleasantest, ^{and quietest,} perhaps, in all the region, and who will have plenty of room for you, as they do not, like some others, entertain ^{the} crowd.

If you see a prospect of being able to come, please let me know at once, that I may advertise you; and if, on the contrary, you are unable to accept our invitation, we are not the less anxious to hear from you soon.

Mary Anne is quite ill with a cold. She came home from Longwood a few days since, having gained strength from her visit there, but she is now prostrate. I hope, however, that she will be better in a few days. She joins me in love to you and Helen and the other members of your household.

What sort of an anniversary Phillips, Pillsbury & Co. will have to-morrow I do not know. Their treasury is nearly empty, however, and I hear that Susan Anthony and some others are for changing the name of the organization so as to include woman's rights. They have a census to-night, I understand, to settle the platform on which they will stand to-morrow.

Yours, affectionately,

Oliver Johnson

Our meeting commences on the first Thursday of June - the 9th.
You would have to leave home, therefore, ^{the} on Tuesday morning or evening proceeding that day.
